

STEAM BOILER INSPECTIONS - WE'LL TAKE THE HEAT

If you run a coffee shop, pub, hotel, office, restaurant, garden centre (and more!) there's quite the chance that you will also own or run a café steam boiler. These machines use steam to produce the frothy milk that we love in our drinks such as cappuccinos, lattes and hot chocolates.

Did you know that as the owner or operator of one of these boilers, you're responsible for keeping it, and everyone who comes into contact with it, safe? To help with this, your boiler will fall under the Pressure Safety System Regulations (PSSR) 2000, which clearly outline the need for your boiler to be inspected at regular intervals.

That's where we come in. At Vulcan Inspection Services, our team of experts know everything there is to know about the relevant legislation so that you don't have to. Typically, your boiler examinations should take place every year, unless your Written Scheme of Examination states differently. And it's just as important that they're completed by a 'competent person', who will check for any signs of wear and tear and make sure everything is just as it should be.

Ideally, we'd expect to complete your inspections at the same time as your annual service. Your service engineer will need to strip down your boiler so that we can get to the internal working parts, check for defects and get you up and running again with as little disruption as possible. Our team of planners will work with you to schedule your examinations so that we can make sure our work really works for you.

Our partnership with NFU Mutual goes way back. We've been providing the most thorough inspections for their customers since 1997 and we really know our stuff. We're type A accredited, giving you complete peace of mind that that they're getting the best quality service when they partner with us.

Industrial safety can be a matter of life or death and we all know it can't be left to chance. If an issue with your boiler goes unnoticed, it could be catastrophic. At Vulcan Inspection Services we're here to make sure everyone gets home safe.

Leave nothing to chance with Vulcan Inspection Services.
